Grosvenor Arch, Escalante, Utah

I wrote a lot about this splendid arch last year, but I'm posting this so I'll have something to connect my video to.

I came back this year -- and jouncing along that 11-mile washboard road – to do the "double": get late afternoon sun angles, boondock overnight nearby, and catch the morning sun angles. I also came to get drone views. Little Bird was itching to buzz around this cool formation. No, I did not have the chutzpah to try to fly through it. Maybe next time…

So here are some PM and AM shots. Check out the video by clicking on the green text on my home page. It looks like this: [video] ← this one is not a link
