The Flyin' Solo VanLife on the Highways and Byways of North America
RICK'S ROADS
Ride Along and Enjoy the People, Places, and Who Knows What

BLOG POST: 2025.10.17
Fall Hollow, Natchez Trace Parkway, Tennessee

I have written about Fall Hollow before (a couple of times, actually), but I'm posting this so I'll have something to connect my video to.

Fall Hollow is a stop along the northern section of the Natchez Trace Parkway, a 444-mile long pleasure road maintained by the National Park Service.

The narrow, muddy, rooty and rocky Fall Hollow Trail winds down from the turnout, where a few trickles of water seem to seep right out from under leaves here and there. As the path descends, so does the water. The trickles join together and gather momentum as they tumble down the layered limestone faces of small cliffs and slopes until it all culminates in a modest 15-foot waterfall. It looks like this:

Check it out on my YouTube channel: https://youtu.be/9T2Md1gTWCg?si=eE-TjliV8H_KK_Mx